9 Read the text. Are the sentences true (T) or false (F)?

What would you think of going to a school where you can choose what to study? You can also decide if you want to go to lessons and if you want to do homework. This type of institution does actually exist, and was started many years ago. The idea is that students should have control over their education and be able to decide what they think is best for them. It sounds very radical, but people who support it say that it really works and children get higher results on their exams than those in the traditional education system.

So how does it work? Well, pupils take part in weekly meetings with teachers and the principal. Their opinion is as important as the adults' opinions, and they can help make decisions about how the school functions. Lessons are not compulsory, so children can choose what they attend and when. This helps them to focus on the subjects that they are really interested in and they achieve more. The owners believe that children are smarter than we think and that they can take responsible decisions about their education.

This is only an experiment, however, and most people don't believe that the idea is good for all schools and all pupils. The criticism is that it is only for a small elite, and that children who are not as smart would get worse grades on exams. Most parents are also unsure about this system. They think that kids can't decide on their own what is good for them because they don't have enough life experience. Maybe this is true, but having a fully democratic school is an interesting proposal.

- Pupils have to go to some lessons in the school. ____
- Supporters of this type of school say that children are more successful. ____
- No subjects are compulsory for pupils. ____
- Pupils don't focus on their favourite subjects. ____
- People think that this type of school isn't good for all pupils. ____
